Business trip, vacation, or visit to the Magic Kingdom? Wait no more. Residents and visitors alike will now have the opportunity to take the popular South Florida intercity eco-friendly rail company, Brightline, to Orlando. Earlier this year, Brightline made history as the fastest train in the Southeast, reaching speeds of 130 mph so getting there will take you just over 3 hours. This extension will create an efficient and convenient link between these two major cities, enabling travelers to traverse the 235-

mile distance in a matter of hours. The Orlando expansion is expected to open up new opportunities for tourism, business and personal travel, connecting these two regions further cementing Brightline's role as a transformative force in Florida's transportation landscape as it connects two of the fastest growing regions in the state: Central and South Florida.

Unveiled for the first time last month, the new Brightline Orlando Station, a modern 37,350 square foot station is located in Orlando International Airport's new Train Station facility adjacent to Terminal C. The Brightline Orlando Station is designed by Bigtime Design Studios, an architecture firm based out of Miami that also designed the newly-opened Brightline stations in Boca Raton and Aventura, alongside the architect of record Sonny Fornoles of Borrelli + Partner. With Brightline's beautiful spacious lounge, riders will have an opportunity to wait in luxury until their train is ready to board.

Along with the new station, commuters will be able to seamlessly park their cars at the terminal with more than 350 parking spaces designated for Brightline guests. "As a lifelong Central Floridian, it made me proud to see the advancement of our community today as our true multimodal hub becomes a reality and we celebrate the Brightline Orlando Station and soon to come train service to our international airport. This station represents so much more than a new train service, it is a critical connection for our community to jobs and opportunity and further showcases the power of partnerships and what our culture of collaboration here in Central Florida can do to improve the lives of our residents, workers and travelers when we work together." said Orlando Mayor Buddy Dyer.
